

Kalgoorlie Accommodation Support Service

Kalgoorlie Accommodation Support Service provides access to Department of Housing accommodation for a period of 12 months. The service is for women with or without children; who are homeless or escaping family domestic violence.

An Anglicare WA housing Support Worker will visit regularly and have phone contact with residents to develop a collaborative support plan with them. The plan will identify any issues that have contributed to the individual's homelessness and propose solutions, including referrals to useful organisations, financial strategies, and appropriate education and training opportunities.

The housing support workers have been trained to assist individual's in their physical and emotional recovery from the trauma of domestic violence.

Referrals to professional counselling can be organised. The service is designed to be culturally sensitive. Anglicare WA aims to build the capacity of individuals and families, and provide them with the necessary tools to maintain tenancy independently.

Kalgoorlie Accommodation Support Service is for single women, with or without children, who are victims of family and domestic violence and as a result are either homeless or at imminent risk of homelessness. People who use this service must be permanent residents of Australia.
