Chair and CEO message

John Atkins AO, Chair
Mark Glasson, CEO

"Often the barriers people face are not personal failings, they're structural pressures." – Mark Glasson, CEO

During the last year Anglicare WA celebrated 50 years of supporting the people and communities of Western Australia. This provided us with the opportunity to reflect on our past and to imagine a better future. As part of this reflection, we revisited the original principles drafted in 1975 to guide the work of our organisation. One especially sparked our interest, it read; Any service should have as its basis the understanding that Social Welfare includes the responsibility of identifying social issues and their causes, and for working for changes within society which advance personal growth and social justices.

While the language might have changed over the last 50 years, this principle is as strong today as it was in the 1970s. The flame that was sparked back then can be traced through the last 50 years and still burns bright at Anglicare WA today. This report provides a snapshot of the work we have done over the last year. It talks about how we have helped individuals in need of support, how we have changed systems that cause hardship and how we have built an organisation with the strength to continue the work which commenced over 50 years ago. We pay thanks to the members of our Board, the Executive team and all our staff, volunteers and partners who collectively enable us to achieve the great things contained in this report.
